

Model Car Selection 2013/2014

Mercedes-Benz

“You can be addicted to Mercedes – addicted to the attention to detail, the perfection, the allure.”

Ever since the invention of the automobile, Mercedes-Benz has been building vehicles with conviction and passion. The same passion is applied to creating the miniature versions of the star-branded vehicles – ensuring that these models are every match for their larger counterparts.

The selection of over 350 models in a variety of categories is designed to appeal to collectors around the world who share a passion for perfection and design. The range is constantly updated too: as soon as a new Mercedes-Benz makes its debut on the road, its miniature is already waiting to be purchased via our Mercedes-Benz partners – in a variety of colours and scales. It takes a lot of work to get to this point.

Like the original from Mercedes-Benz, every miniature has its story – a story which is packed with technology, creativity, precision craftsmanship and a tremendous attention to detail and which can take up to 18 months. Before work on the miniature begins, the developers scrutinise the original vehicle – with the aid of cutting-edge CAD technology, a crucial tool when it comes to specifying the precise basic form of the model.

CAD data reveals the “genetic make-up” of a genuine Mercedes-Benz.

The data is first processed and modified by specialists before work begins on configuring the planned model car.

Key features from the full-scale vehicle are defined at this stage – from the selection of light-alloy wheels to the engine and the design of the interior.

800 photos of the original vehicle may seem a lot – but it’s perfectly normal at Mercedes.

A close-up of a door hinge is just as important here as an image of the control elements in the cockpit area or a picture highlighting the design of the leather seats. Hundreds of photographs of the original vehicle are painstakingly scrutinised by the model makers and used to make further adaptations to the CAD data.

This development process, which aims to create as close a replica of the original as possible, can take up to three months – which isn’t bad when you consider that a completed scale 1:18 model car features up to 120 individual parts.

A Mercedes is contemporary without being a slave to fashion.

Design plays a major role at Mercedes-Benz – and that’s echoed in these miniature masterpieces. After all, creating a model car isn’t simply about “miniaturising” the full-scale model – the model also has to capture the emotional appeal of the brand. Product managers and specialists at the Sindelfingen Design Studios work hand in hand to ensure that the first prototype reflects the allure of its larger counterpart. Key aspects of the design, such as the light-catching contours, are painstakingly scrutinised. The dimensions of individual parts such as the windscreen wipers or exterior mirrors have to be in the correct proportion to the overall vehicle size.

Refining the prototype by hand – in keeping with the brand’s traditional yet innovative approach.

Once the form has been perfected, attention is turned to the functionality. The boot lid, bonnet and doors all have to open and close as they do on the original. Even the smallest deviation must be recorded and corrected during the prototype stage.

Now it’s time for sensitive handcrafting – the model is smoothed, filed and ground until the new resin prototype meets the high demands of the Mercedes-Benz brand and is approved by the vehicle designers. Developing the first prototype can take up to four months – and another three to four months are spent

“It takes almost 18 months to ensure this kind of precision, design and detail...

Original and miniature on creating and perfecting the first, unpainted diecast metal model, also known as the “first shot”. Only now is the miniature ready for series production.

The best or nothing – no scrimping on the paintwork.

Achieving a virtually 100% colour match with the original vehicle is a long, drawn-out process. A sample of the exact shade of the standard paintwork is analysed and replicated, and a series of intensive colour comparisons ensures an accurate match. Now the bodywork, like that of the full-scale original, is dried in a furnace. The model is given three coats of paint and the light-catching contours are perfectly replicated. At last the miniature Mercedes can emerge from the shadows of its larger counterpart – and a fascinating model with emotional appeal is finally given the green light.

18 months in development, up to 120 individual parts, 3 coats of paint, over 350 models – pure passion from Mercedes-Benz.

...the end result: a Mercedes model that will retain its allure for a lifetime.”
